Recent attacks on pregnancy centers have referenced claims from scientific literature that the relative risk of mental health problems following a single elective first-trimester abortion is of no greater risk to mental health than carrying that pregnancy to term.

Yet, the voice of women we work with and their stories speak loudly to something completely different. How do we reconcile this, and how does it influence our work with women wounded by abortion or who are abortion minded?

Join us as we explore these two diverse entities and where they lead us.
